EFFECT OF 1941 DEFEAT

More times than we can count, the blood of France has been spilled on the battlefields of Europe. What other nation can point to so many soldier's graves? Fear of spilling the blood of her young men has never caused France to quiver or draw back from battle!

Nor would the generation of soft-living Frenchmen (1920-1940) have so undermined the character of the nation that France would draw back from a fight in this hour of 1941. Witness that the decades preceding the French Revolution were the most corrupt in French history, yet the children of 1770 became world's best fighters in the era of Napoleon, and established the Republic.

The extent to which France has now been crushed cannot be, there must be some new explanation, and we believe that new explanation is that a defeat in an ALL-OUT blitz war is worse and more complete that most wars of recorded history. More than blood is spilled. Modern blitz defeat is infinitely worse than the destruction of property and the spilling of blood on a battlefield.

We doubt that any nation defeated by this great German military machine will revive itself in a generation. So complete is a BLITZ DEFEAT, that we question whether Poland, Austria and other defeated sovereignties need be set up again and left to walk alone.

No modern nation can afford to run the risk of defeat in this war, because that nation will never be the same again. We should profit by the bitter experience of France, and redouble the speed of our own defense program.

A UNITED NATION

America does not need to be divided and quarreling at home just to prove she is a democracy. Any more than husband and wife need to get into an argument just to prove they have minds of their own.

A crack football team isn't all made up of quarterbacks. Every man has his part. Each depends on all the others. So with the nation. Unless we have national teamwork someone is going to take the ball away from us.

Nations in Europe have gone down because they were at war inside themselves. Their people could not get together. They refused to face facts. They were caught unprepared. Even as the storm broke, men fought to get more for themselves.

National unity is the heart of national defense. If a nation is united, no Fifth Column can slip through and sabotage its strength.

A united people will have the spirit which no disaster will shake and no danger will weaken.

Unity is more than agreeing on what we like or whom we hate. Team-work cannot be built by high talking and low living by fine ideals and selfish lives.

"Team-work," said Knute Rockne, 'is a combination of self-sacrifice, brains and sweat.' It means working together for America. Honest teamwork between government and business, labor and management, union and union, Republican and Democrat, city and farm.

A united people will build the new America. A nation set free from fear, hate and greed. A nation that holds the secret of the new world.—Clifton Forge Review.

AN ORCHID TO THE SCRIBES

From Danville Bee

Little has been said in this war about the war correspondents fulfilling one of the most difficult news assignments in the history of journalism. There is no need to single any of them out, but talking them as a whole, the special writers of the big metropolitan dailies, the AP men, the UP men and the International News men— all are living up to the fine traditions of newspaperdom. Some have been killed, a few wounded. Those in the trek from Greece underwent untold physical hardships — chartering outboard motorboats for 400 mile journeys; going without food and sleep, losing all their possessions but ever alert for the 'story' and coping with the universal problem of how to get the news to America. . . . . The real test of the foreign correspondent these days is getting the story past the censor and then getting it to America. This is a brave chapter of American journalism which will make some good telling in days to come.

SHOULD BE DONE

We are glad to read that Colgate W. Darden, Jr., candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, has recommended the enlargement of the State Highway Commission from five to nine members. The amount of money handled by the State Highway Commission has increased by leaps and bounds in recent years. It is fast approaching $30,000,000 a year! Likewise, the powers vested in the Commission increased.

In a democracy, government must be kept close to the people. Regardless of the wisdom and capability of administers, it is bad business in a democracy to invest too much power in a small body. We feel that it is perfectly in order for each of Virginia's nine Congressional Districts to have a member on the Virginia Highway Commission. We hope that the endorsement of the idea by Candidate Darden will enhance the likelihood of its adoption.

A DUD'S THE NAME!

We do not recall a gubernatorial campaign in Virginia that turned out to be such a complete 'dud' as that of 1941! Not a ripple of interest has been created by the best efforts of the candidates. It is not even as interesting as that of four years ago, when James H. Price coasted into the nomination. So dull was the 1941 campaign, so complete the lack of interest on the part of John Q. Citizen, that Hon. Ashton Dovell withdrew from the contest. Being a practical politician, Mr. Dovell knew what other Virginians know: that with no public interest whatever in the outcome, the party leaders will easily win the primary and election for their chosen candidate, Colgate W. Darden, Jr. It takes no prophet to predict an easy victory for Mr. Darden. And, what's more, we believe that he will make an able Governor. He is a distinguished Virginian and well grounded in the Old Dominion tradition of sound state government.

It has been suggested that Virginians are not interested in electing a Governor because they are interested in the war situation and in national defense. We do not agree with that explanation. To accept such a theory would be to believe that Virginians can be interested in only one thing at a time, which certainly is not the case. We, rather, feel that the lack of interest in the state primary is due larrely to the failure of the candidates to develop vital issues and carry them to the mass of the people. The vital problems exist and some day a mighty campaign will rock the state when the vivid personalities arrive upon the stage to a fiery heat. But the 1941 competitors of the favored by others, not conscious so much of others as of the presence of God; 'to hear all things'—not to be amused or to sleep; 'that have been commanded thee of the Lord'—not to listen to human conjecture or the exploiting of doubts, but to receive a positive message which is delivered in a reverent spirit and with the prophetic formula: 'Thus saith the Lord.' What would happen were all Christian churches filled with such audiences?" (Charles R. Erdman).

This brings us to what is most important of all in broadening our spiritual horizons.

IV. An Understanding of God's Love (vv. 17, 18).

God's love is for all people. Since He has not raised any barriers of race, creed, color, class, or social position, it is not for His followers, and assuredly not for His servants, to set up hindering restrictions which He does not countenance. If God intended to save Gentiles, Peter wanted to be an instrument in His hand, not a hindrance in His way. One of the needs of our day is that those doing God's work should not withstand Him and His love, but one who is the same yesterday, today, and forever, is ready to work as powerfully today as He did in the days of Peter and Paul, or of Finney and Moody. Let us give Him liberty to work in and through us, not as we may wish, but as He desires. Who are we that we should withstand God?

Goal of Life

Oh, yet we trust that, somehow,
Good will be the final goal of ill,
That nothing walks with aimless feet,
That not one life shall be destroyed,
Or cast as rubbish to the void,
When God has made the pile complete.—Tennyson.

WHEN YOU DRANK A TULIP

Back in the days before the World War, there was a song which began, 'When You Were a Tulip, a Sweet Yellow Tulip.....'

Well, that's all over. They're drinking tulips now in Holland, and perhaps in Germany, too. A private letter from the great Dutch tulip-grower recently revealed that nearly three million bulbs of his 1939 crop are now being treated for use as a coffee substitute. Whether the Germans are taking the coffee from the Dutch and leaving them their own tulip-bulbs to drink is not made clear. Possibly all central Europe is now drinking tulip-bubs and acorns as their first installment of the great new era promised by their conquerers.

In any case, one irreparable injury has already been done to Holland. The tulip bulb center of the world has shifted to the United States, and nothing the Nazis can ever do is likely to restore to Holland a pre-eminence she had won by her own efforts.

BROADENING CHRISTIAN HORIZONS: PETER'S VISION

LESSON TEXT—Acts 11:5-18.
GOLDEN TEXT—Then Peter opened his mouth, and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons.—Acts 10:34.

"The best argument for Christianity is a Christian" (Henry Drummond). Peter presented just such an argument when, early in the history of Christianity, there arose a difference of opinion regarding his ministry to a Gentile and his family. The stumbling stone of offense became a stepping stone to higher things, leading to the place of broader horizons. Peter, instead of appealing to his apostolic authority or asserting his position, simply related what God had done. He presented the best proof that God had actually been at work; namely, a redeemed soul.

We may learn from this lesson that the way to broadened horizons and greater usefulness for the church is by

I. A Vision of God's Plan (vv. 5-10).

All men are equally precious in God's sight. God taught Peter very effectively that, whether Gentile or Jew, the Lord is "not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance" (II Pet. 3:9).

When God speaks we do well to give heed to His message, even though it cuts across our ideas and prejudices, as it often does. It is not our plan that is important; it is God's plan and purpose. As we walk in that way we shall have

II. An Experience of God's Power (vv. 11-15).

The Holy Spirit had fallen on the Gentiles and they actually had been saved. Is it not singular that in the early church they could hardly believe that a Gentile could be saved? Now we are astonished if a Jew is saved! Why will we in our unbelief limit the Holy One of Israel?

The all-powerful gospel of the grace of God is still saving men and women, Jews and Gentiles, from their sins. Have you seen it happen? It is a great inspiration to faith and service. God is ready so to encourage us—He is the same today as He was when He spoke to Cornelius. Are we willing to run His errands, proclaim His message? To do so we need

III. An Appreciation of God's Word (v. 16).

The best way to learn the meaning of God's Word is to use it, live it, obey it. "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God" (John 7:17). Peter had learned anew that God's Word meant just what it said. We who are God's servants should believe His Word and act on it in faith.

Observe that Cornelius had gathered a group in his household to hear the Word of God (Acts 10:27, 33). Could we not do the same? "Cannot each calculate with exactness some time and some place where the gospel is to be preached, and is it not possible to bring thither one's relatives and friends? Secondly, when present in a place of worship, cannot each be prepared to say, 'We are all here present'—all, family and friends, mind as well as body; 'in the sight of God'—not to be seen by others, not conscious so much of others as of the presence of God; 'to hear all things'—not to be amused or to sleep; 'that have been commanded thee of the Lord'—not to listen to human conjecture or the exploiting of doubts, but to receive a positive message which is delivered in a reverent spirit and with the prophetic formula: 'Thus saith the Lord.' What would happen were all Christian churches filled with such audiences?" (Charles R. Erdman).

This brings us to what is most important of all in broadening our spiritual horizons.

By L. L. STEVENSON

No matter how it may seem at times, New York is not always hardhearted. The case of Leon Weisberg is proof. You undoubtedly have read how Weisberg, a hack cab driver, went to the assistance of Edward Maher, a policeman who was battling for his life with four avenue bandits. Maher was killed and Weisberg suffered such a serious neck wound that it was not known for hours whether he would live or die. The widow of the hero Maher received a death benefit from the police department. The police department officially commended the heroic Weisberg. The department could go no farther. The city of New York makes no provision for heroes killed or wounded while assisting its officers of the law. So it seemed as if Weisberg would have to pay hospital, medical and other bills himself besides losing his earnings while convalescing.

• • •

Not that Weisberg was destitute. The taxi job was only a stop-gap. Having completed his education, he took the first honest work he could find. The earnings of a New York taxi driver by no means bring him into the higher brackets when it comes to paying income taxes. But Weisberg, who is 29 years old, with his wife, through various economies and much self-denial, had succeeded in saving some money. They were planning that when enough had been laid by, Weisberg would go into business for himself. But confronted with unexpected and heavy expenses, it looked very much as if such a dream would never come true, and that Weisberg on his recovery, would have to go right on driving a cab for someone else.

• • •

When this became known, New York's heart-of-stone reputation went blooey. Almost immediately funds for Weisberg got under way. Money sufficient to meet hospital and other expenses rolled in. But it wasn't all. A motorcar dealer, a vacation down in Florida, wired the firm to turn over to Weisberg, as soon as he left the hospital, one of the finest and best cabs. Only that more thing remained to be done before Weisberg would be his own boss. To operate a taxi in New York, a police medallion is necessary. The quota having been reached, no more were being issued.

• • •

Among the many who admired Weisberg's heroism was 60-year-old James McKenna, a veteran taxi driver. McKenna started driving away back in the days of Stanford White and John Jacob Astor, he stand having been near the old Union club and the old Waldorf. Stricken with illness, he knew that his days behind the wheel were over. Since he had been an owner-driver, he had a medallion. It was a valuable possession. But, without hesitation, he turned it over to Weisberg.

• • •

As this is being written, Weisberg is convalescing in his Brooklyn home. So far as I can learn, he is the only taxi driver ever given official police escort, with screaming sirens, when he left a hospital. When he was discharged from the French hospital where he was taken after he was shot, a big delegation of police was on hand to do him honor and see that he got home all right. So was that shiny new taxi which he will pilot about the streets when he gets well. He rode home in that with a uniformed chauffeur at the wheel. If his eyes strayed to a silver plaque inside the cab he couldn't be blamed. The plaque is a record of his heroic deed.

• • •

Just a few lines more. Because of a holdup, Weisberg has been set up in business. Max Spaas, who had opened to be on the spot with a few lens camera, has received several hundred dollars for pictures he snapped. And the two Esposito brothers, who were the bandits, are awaiting trial for murder.

• • •

Jimmy Van Heusen, tunesmith instead of headlight neckties, wears eye-blinding handkerchiefs. Meyer Davis is allergic to feathers and won't allow his vocalists or members of his family to wear them as ornaments . . . Benny Leonard, ex-champ, never wears a brown suit because he thinks it's bad luck. And here I am at THE END.

Driver Unable to Read Signs if Wife Sleeps

SPARTANBURG, S. C.—A fellow charged with driving the wrong way on the highway told the magistrate, "I don't know it."

The jurist exploded. "Can't you read?" he demanded. "There are dozens of one-way signs."

"Well, I can't read, your honor. My wife was with me and she can read, but she was asleep."

WHY IS HYDRA-MATIC DIFFERENT?
AS SIMPLE AS- 2+2=4
FLUID COUPLING + FULLY AUTOMATIC TRANSMISSION = HYDRA-MATIC
Built and backed by General Motors—offered in Oldsmobile!
NO GEARS TO SHIFT
NO CLUTCH TO PRESS
Fluid coupling alone can do much to make driving easier. But it can't eliminate all manual shifting. Only Hydra-Matic is completely automatic.
FLUID coupling is just one part of Hydra-Matic Drive. Hydra-Matic includes also a fully automatic four-speed transmission. It's the combination of the two that permits elimination of the last of the gears. Both are necessary to give you the stepped-up performance and the completely automatic operation that you get only in Hydra-Matic Drive. Come in and try the one drive that goes all the way to make driving simpler, easier and safer!
*OPTIONAL AT EXTRA COST
Fluid coupling cannot eliminate all clutch pushing. Only Hydra-Matic does away with the conventional clutch! There's no clutch pedal at all!
